It is an all-purpose fruit of unusual merit.

It ripens about a week later than Elberta.

Rich Queen Blackberries

When you were a "kid" was there anything ever any better than "good old jam" and a piece of buttered bread? And now that you are just a grown-up "kid," is there anything more satisfying than "two great, white slabs of bread cemented together with layers of butter and jam?"

Order Queen Blackberries for your garden.

Grapes For Many Purposes

Grapes grow wild in nearly all parts of the United States, so are at home nearly anywhere.

Properly managed, a very few vines will supply a family sufficient fruit for eating fresh and for jellies, juice and preserves.

Among the best all-purpose grapes for this section is Carman Grape, which should be included in every planting.

Compass Cherry

True cherries are not adapted to all parts of the Southwest, but the Compass Cherry, a hybrid plum-cherry, will thrive wherever peaches do.

It will bear very young, the large grade of trees frequently bearing in June following the fall or winter in which they are planted.
